Sol, Letras and Lavapiés

Sol, Letras and Lavapiés are neighbourhoods in central Madrid, the capital of Spain.

Understand

The Puerta del Sol square is Madrid's centre of the centre and therefore the symbolic omphalos of the whole kingdom. Here is milestone zero of Spain's road network from which all distances are measured. At least once a year, the whole nation looks here, when national TV stations broadcast the New Year's celebrations on Puerta del Sol and Spaniards swallow their twelve grapes to the chimes of the post office's belfry. North of Puerta del Sol, around Calle de Preciados and Calle del Carmen, is the main shopping district of central Madrid.

The northern limit of this district, Gran Vía, is the Spanish capital's most splendid avenue. It is lined by tall, lavishly ornated banking, insurance and shopping palaces from the early 1900s.

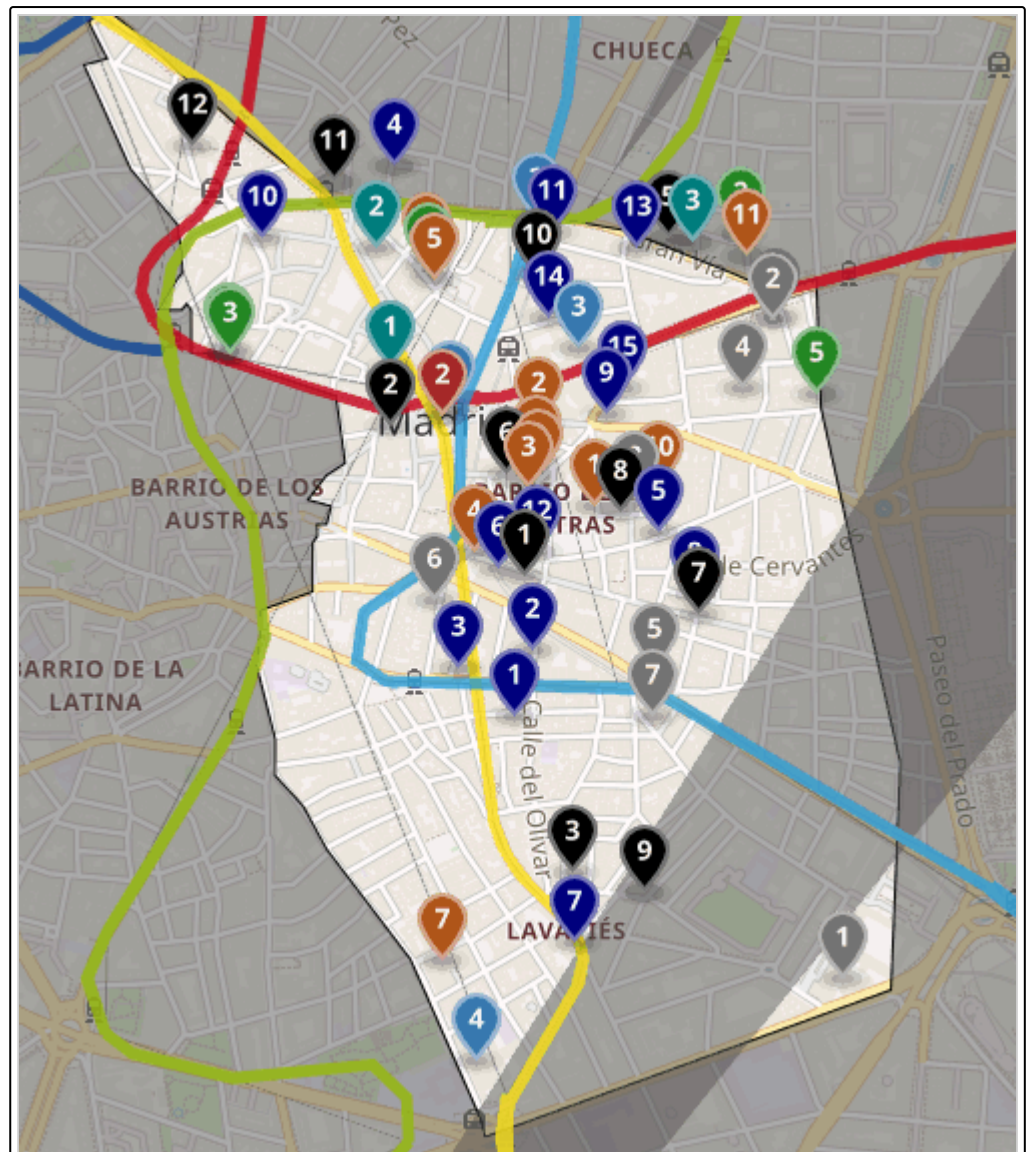

The neighbourhood around the Spanish parliament (Cortes) and calle de las Huertas is commonly known as the barrio de las Letras, literally the "quarter of letters", given that the most important writers of classical Spanish literature—Miguel de Cervantes, Lope de Vega, Francisco de Quevedo, Luis de Góngora—lived here. Around the Plaza Santa Ana is one of Madrid's favourite areas for casual dining and drinking with friends at night.

Lavapiés is Madrid's most multicultural and multiethnic neighbourhood. About half of its population have their roots in Latin America, Africa or Asia. This is the place to go to encounter folk and dance music from around the world, unconventional cafés and individual shops.

The "museum strip" or Paseo del Arte, to the east of Letras and Lavapiés, including the world-famous Prado, the Thyssen-Bornemisza Foundation, Caixaforum and the National Museum of Modern Art "Reina Sofía", is covered in a separate article.

Get in

Map of Madrid/Sol-Letras-Lavapiés

Madrid's main station, 1 Estación de Atocha, is near the southeastern corner of Lavapiés.

Suburban trains (Cercanías  lines C-3 and C-4) stop at an underground station directly below Puerta del Sol.

Most metro lines pass through this district. Apart from the central 2 Sol 1 2 3, there are Banco de España 2, Sevilla 2, Gran Vía 1 5, Callao 3 5, Santo Domingo 2, Plaza España 3 10 along Gran Vía, Antón Martín 1 near Letras, Tirso de Molinas 1 and Lavapiés 3 in the eponymous neighbourhood.

Landmarks and architecture

- 1 Puerta del Sol (Sol 1 2 3). This plaza is the heart of Madrid and one of the busiest places in the city - a hub for the local transit system, a favorite meeting spot for locals, a visible area for festivals or political demonstrations, and an opportune location for tour guides, street performers, pickpockets and anyone else looking to take advantage of all the tourists on-hand. In the center of the plaza sits the Statue of King Charles III on horseback, facing the Royal Post Office (Real Casa de Correos), the red-and-white building adorned with a clock tower on the plaza's south side. The building served as Madrid's first post office, then the police headquarters under Franco before being transformed into its current use as the office of the President of Madrid, the head of the regional government. The clock tower is noteworthy for being the center focus of New Year's celebrations every year, which are broadcast across Spain and mark the traditional eating of the Twelve Grapes (one for each ring of the bell) and the beginning of a new year. In front of the building is Kilometer Zero (Kilómetro Cero), a plaque showing the point where the measuring of national highway system begins. On the east side of the plaza is the famous Bear and the Madroño Tree Statue, a bear climbing a madroño tree, which is the symbol of Madrid, and on the west side of the plaza is the Mariblanca statue, a white marble goddess of at least the 17th century. Nearby the giant neon Tío Pepe sign sits above the plaza and is a famous fixture of this area.
- 2 Gran Vía (Banco de España 2, Gran Vía 1 5, Callao 3 5, Santo Domingo 2, or Plaza de España 3 10). Literally 'Great Way' (better translated as 'Broadway'), Gran Vía is one of the busiest avenues in Madrid. Running from Plaza de España to Plaza de Cibeles, it is the location of the cinema district and a number of shopping malls and is lined with large billboards and lights. There's a constant buzz of traffic and life – 03:00-04:00 early morning traffic jams are not unusual.

Eat

Many of the restaurants and cervecerías in the Sol area have generic poster board advertisements on the sidewalks with pictures advertising various paella dishes. These paellas are usually of bad quality and should be avoided. If you are looking for good, authentic Spanish paella, it is usually best to find a more expensive, 'sit-down' type of restaurant that offers a variety of paella dishes. There are also a number of deli-like shops along Calle Arenal that offer food para llevar (for take away).

Budget

- 1 Cervecería 100 Montaditos (<http://spain.100montaditos.com/en/>), Calle del Príncipe, 18. Daily 10:00-02:00. Branch of the popular nationwide chain that offers 100 different montaditos (small sandwiches). Great place to go for a cheap drink and bite to eat. Further branches are at Calle de la Montera, 34 (near metro Gran Vía) and Plaza de las Cortes, 3. (updated Sep 2022)

- 2 Museo del Jamón (<http://www.museodeljamon.com/>), Carrera de San Jerónimo, 6 (100 m east of Puerta del Sol). M-Th 09:00-00:30, F Sa 09:00-01:00, Su 10:00-00:30. One of several branches of this chain. Offers deli takeout service as well as tapas and raciones at reasonable prices. They offer €1 ham sandwiches and a 'picnic' lunch consisting of a said ham sandwich, fresh fruit and a drink for €2 (Feb 2017). Another branch is at Calle de Atocha, 54 (metro Antón Martín). (updated Sep 2022)
- 3 Casa Toni, C. de la Cruz, 14. Very solid local option for small dishes/tapas. Recommended are chorizo, pig ears, tortilla with chorizo (omelette with chorizo), morcilla, sepia a la plancha. Casual non pretentious place. (updated Sep 2022)
- 4 Matador, C. de la Cruz, 39. Fantastic little stop for tapas. A very cozy place with good tapas and they always treat you very well. With a funny decoration. (updated Sep 2022)
- 5 Takos Al Pastor, C. de la Abada, 2. Good taqueria. The tacos are amazing. The quesadillas and tortas are also worth it. The queue seems super long, but it moves fast. (updated Sep 2022)
- 6 Puerto Rico, Calle de Chinchilla, 2. Small little cantine with excellent and satisfying authentic Spanish food. You have to queue, but it's quite fluid and it's worth it. (updated Sep 2022)
- 7 Mercado de San Fernando (<https://mercadodesanfernando.es/>), Embajadores, 41 (Lavapiés 4 walk down C. de Tribulete (next to Carrefour) for 250 metres.). 09:00-18:00.
